Two Dozen Men Walk Journey of Faith as Oklahoma City Archdiocese Seminarians

By Fr. William Novak, V.G.
Director of Seminarians

Over the next few weeks, 23 men from parishes across the Archdiocese will begin another academic year and I will begin a Pastoral Year as they discern a call to the priesthood. This year we welcome six new seminarians, which include one from Mexico. Rodrigo Cerna will study at the Seminario Hispano de Santa Maria de Guadalupe in Mexico City. The other new seminarians include Zak Boazman from St. Thomas More Parish, Kevin Hathaway, also from St. Thomas More, John Herrera from St. Joseph Parish in Norman, Tomas Sandoval from St. Monica Parish in Edmond, and Vic Luong from Our Lady's Cathedral. Danny Grover from St. Andrew Parish in Moore will begin a Pastoral Year at St. Charles Borromeo Parish in Oklahoma City.

Our men in theology are enrolled in three different seminaries: St. Meinrad Seminary in St. Meinrad, Ind., St. John Vianney Seminary in Denver, Colo., and the North American College in Rome, Italy. Our college seminarians attend Conception Seminary in Conception, Mo.

Brian Buettner from St. Mark Parish in Norman will be ordained a transitional deacon at St. Peter's Basilica in Rome on Oct. 4, and God willing, a priest at Our Lady's Cathedral on June 29, 2013. Please pray for these men as they continue their formation and for all others who are discerning a vocation to the priesthood.

If you would like more information about the seminary, please contact Father Stephen Hamilton, Vocations Director, at (405) 721-9351.

On Assumption, Pope Says Mary is Listening to Prayers

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (CNS) — Assumed into heaven, Mary is with God and is ready to listen and respond to cries for help, Pope Benedict XVI said. Joining God in heaven, Mary “does not draw away from us, does not go to an unknown galaxy,” but becomes “even closer to each one of us,” the Pope said Aug. 15 during his homily at Mass for the feast of the Assumption.

Our Moral Duties as Catholic Citizens (Part 1)

With the general election rapidly approaching, now is the time for all citizens to prepare to cast our votes in a conscientious and informed manner. It is our right and our responsibility. It is not only a civic but a moral duty. Responsible citizenship is a virtue and participation in political life is a moral obligation. We Catholics take this responsibility very seriously, or at least we ought to.

Through various pastoral statements the Catholic bishops of the United States through the years have repeatedly reaffirmed the Church’s role in public life. We have emphasized our responsibility to participate in shaping the moral and ethical character of the society in which we live. We do not do this in a partisan manner. In fact, Catholics may often feel politically disenfranchised since no political party and few candidates fully share our comprehensive commitment to the full range of authentic human goods. These commitments begin with the protection of human life and dignity from conception to natural death. They include the promotion and defense of marriage, the preservation of religious liberty and the rights of conscience, as well as a host of other goods such as health care, a just economy and liberty and the rights of conscience, as well as a host of other goods such as health care, a just economy and many concerns that bear directly upon human flourishing and the common good.

The clergy and laity have important complementary roles in public life. As bishops and priests, it is our duty to hand on the Church’s moral and social teaching. It is neither our role nor our intention to tell Catholics how to vote regarding a particular candidate or office. Rather, it is our responsibility as teachers of the faith to assist Catholics in properly forming their consciences so that they may cast their votes in light of fundamental moral truths, such as the right to life, the nature of marriage or the dignity of the poor and the immigrant.

Faith and reason are the sources of our moral principles. Faith is never incompatible with human reason. Rather, it expands the horizons of reason. Our Catholic faith, as revealed through the Word of God and interpreted by the teaching authority of the Church, gives us a clear vision of what is true and good for each person, for the family and for society. It is the vision that Christ our Teacher has revealed to be in accord with our human nature and destiny as men and women created in the image and likeness of God, redeemed by Christ and endowed by God with dignity, rights and responsibilities. Pope: Everything in Life Calls People to a Relationship with God

By Cindy Wooden

Everything that happens in life, whether it first appears good or bad, is a reminder that human beings do not have absolute control over their own destinies but were made to be in a relationship with God, Pope Benedict XVI wrote.

“Each thing, each relationship, each joy, like each difficulty, finds its ultimate meaning in being an occasion for a relationship with the Infinite, the voice of God who continually calls us and invites us to raise our sights and to discover in him the fullness of our humanity,” the Pope said in a message to participants in an annual meeting of the Communion and Liberation movement.

The Aug. 19-25 meeting in Rimini, Italy, was to focus on people’s relationship with the infinite.

In his message, released at the Vatican on the meeting’s opening day, Pope Benedict said the natural human yearning for infinity or eternity is, at its foundation, recognition that human beings are creatures.

“This word — creature — seems to be old-fashioned. People prefer to think of themselves as self-made and artisans of their own destiny. Considering the person, a creature can be uncomfortable because it implies an essential reference to something other or better,” he said.

In fact, however, whether they believe in God or not, human beings have that inkling that they are not in complete control and that they were made for eternity, he wrote.

Recognizing God as creator and entering into a relationship with him “does not hide or diminish, but brilliantly reveals, the greatest and supreme dignity of man, who is called to life in order to have a relationship with life itself, with God,” the pope wrote.

Some people ask how it is possible for a finite creature like a human being to have a real relationship with the infinite God, he said. For Christians, the answer is that God assumed a finite form in Jesus Christ.

“From the Incarnation, the moment in which the Word was made flesh, the unbridgeable distance between the finite and infinite was erased,” Pope Benedict wrote.

Also Aug. 19, the Pope recited the Angelus with visitors in the courtyard of the papal summer villa at Castel Gandolfo. Commenting on the day’s Gospel reading, the Pope said that by taking on human form, Jesus was able to suffer and die for the redemption of all humanity.

“We need to accept him with faith, not be scandalized by his humanity,” the Pope said.

Jesus continues giving himself to his followers in the Eucharist, his body and blood, he said.

“Let us rediscover the beauty of the sacrament of the Eucharist, which expresses all the humility and holiness of God: his making himself small, a fragment of the universe to reconcile it completely in his love,” the Pope said.

Annual Young Adult Mass and Cookout Set for Sept. 16

OKLAHOMA CITY — The Young Adult Annual Mass and Cookout will be held Sunday, Sept. 23 at the Catholic Pastoral Center.

The annual event, hosted by Archbishop Paul S. Coakley and the Youth and Young Adult Office, has become a time to gather, reflect and celebrate for youth and young adults throughout the area.

The day begins at 2:30 p.m. with registration. Mass will be celebrated at 5 p.m. with the cookout following.

7-21, 2012 after devoting more than 50 years actively ministering to the people of western Oklahoma.

Father Burger was a resident of New Hamburg, Mo., to Henry A. and Anna (Jelan) Burger. Father Burger and his four older brothers and sisters grew up in Cape Girardeau, Mo., where he attended Catholic schools under the auspices of the Sisters of Notre Dame, graduating in 1939 from Saint Mary High School. His education was interrupted by World War II and his service in the U.S. Navy in the Pacific.

Following his discharge in 1945, Father Burger enrolled at Xavier University, Cincinnati, Ohio, and later transferred to the Art Institute of Chicago. After attending Maryknoll Seminary, Maryknoll, Md., for two years, the Most Reverend Eugene J. McGuinness accepted Father Burger for the Diocese of Oklahoma City and Tulsa. Father Burger completed his seminary training at Assumption Seminary, San Antonio, Texas, and was ordained on Dec. 21, 1954, at the Cathedral of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, Oklahoma City.

Father Burger’s first assignment was to Saint Peter Church, Woodward, and its missions, where he began his lifelong study of Spanish. Future assignments took him to Saint Joseph Church, Buffalo, Sacred Heart Church, Mangum, and its mission, Our Lady of Guadalupe Church, Hollis, and Saint Anthony of Padua Church, Okeene, and its mission, Saint Thomas the Apostle Church, Seiling. In 1978, Father Burger began a 10-year assignment at Saint Peter Church in Guymon with its missions of Church of the Good Shepherd, Boise City, and Sacred Heart Church, Hooker. His devotion to Hispanic ministry continued during his assignment to Saint Joseph Church, Blackwell, and Saint Joseph Church, Tonkawa, where he served until his retirement in 2001.

Father Burger credited his dedication to his vocation to prayer. During his assignment at Mangum, he served as Archdiocesan Director of the Catholic Rural Life. In 1991 he received the Las Casas Award in Canton, Okla., in recognition of his advocacy for the Cheyenne and Arapaho people. In 2009, his brother priests honored him with the Father Stanley Rother Faithful Shepherd Award, which is sponsored by the Archdiocesan Presbytery Council.

Father Burger is survived by many nieces and nephews and his many friends at Saint Ann Nursing Home and elsewhere.

A Mass of Christian Burial was celebrated Saturday, Aug. 25 at the Cathedral of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, 3214 N. Lake Avenue, Oklahoma City.

Interment followed immediately at Resurrection Cemetery, 7500 W. Britton Road, Oklahoma City. Funeral arrangements were under the direction of Smith and Kerke Funeral Home, 14624 N. May, Oklahoma City.

Youth and young adults — those in their 20s and 30s — are invited and encouraged to attend.

To register, call your local parish youth adult contact or you may contact the Youth and Young Adult Ministry Office at (405) 721-9220, or email Becky at Jamie@archokc.org.

Please register by Sept. 11. Cost for the event is $10.

New Poverty USA Website Offers Statistics, Resources to Catholics

WASHINGTON — Catholics can learn about the poverty in the United States and concrete ways they can make a difference at a new website from the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB). The site, www.povertyusa.org, was launched Aug. 15 and offers tools and resources to spread the word about poverty in America. Resources include an interactive poverty map with state and county level poverty statistics, a Poverty Tour video which gives viewers a sense of what it is like to live at the federal poverty line, videos and links to Poverty-USAs social media sites, including www.facebook.com/povertyusa.

The website, which is an initiative of the Catholic Campaign for Human Development (CCHD) and USCCB’s Department of Justice, Peace and Human Development, will feature selected news stories related to the state of poverty in the United States. Also, on the county-level view of poverty statistics, visitors will be able to find examples of local organizations working to alleviate poverty in their communities.

Welcome comments regarding the new site or suggestions for future feature articles or guest editorials.

Comments and suggestions may be sent to the Justice, Peace and Human Development main email. Those wishing to receive additional resources on a regular basis can sign up for the email newsletter, Notes for Neighbors.

CCHD is the domestic anti-poverty program of the USCCB and works to break the cycle of poverty by helping low-income people participate in decisions that affect their lives, families and communities. It has a complementary mission of educating on poverty and its causes. This dual pastoral strategy of education for justice and helping people who are poor speak and act for themselves reflects the mandate of the Scriptures and the principles of Catholic social teaching.

CCHD is made possible by the generous support of Catholics in the United States, especially through an annual parish collection. CCHD’s grants to local anti-poverty efforts are matched and monitored in close partnership with local Catholic dioceses. CCHD grants to groups in a local community require the explicit approval of the bishop of that diocese.

The Church, Unions and Changing Times

The defense of nascent trade unionism in late-19th-century America is a bright chapter in the history of the Catholic Church in the United States. When a nervous Vatican was prepared to write off trade unions as the kind of “secret societies” that divided families, the Church opposed, Cardinal James Gibbons of Baltimore defended the Knights of Labor in Rome and forestalled a Vatican condemnation of American unions — an accomplishment that helped the Church retain the loyalty of working class people.

The Church’s defense of the Knights of Labor may or may not have had much influence on Pope Leo XIII’s endorsement of labor-organizing in the 1891 encyclical, Rerum Novarum, but it set a pattern of Catholic support for trade unionism in the United States for a century. That support seemed vindicated and ambitious, opposed, Cardinal James Gibbons of Baltimore defended the Knights of Labor in Rome and forestalled a Vatican condemnation of American unions — an accomplishment that helped the Church retain the loyalty of working class people.

But times and social realities change. The developing social doctrine of the Church has had to take account of the new economic, demographic and fiscal realities — and that process has sometimes required serious rethinking of the Church’s approach to public policy and the positions the Church’s leaders habitually take on specific issues. Similarly, the social doctrine must take account of the changing realities of American trade unionism: one of the most salient of which is that the majority of union members now belong to public-sector workers unions, not unions in the private sector. Most unionized American workers today are government workers.

The very idea of public-sector workers unions is challenged by such stalwart liberals as Franklin D. Roosevelt and AFL-CIO president George Meany. Now that public-sector unions are a large part of the “blue collar” dependent self-governing trade union” Solidarity played a crucial role in the collapse of European communism in the 1980s. But social scientists typically raise three cautions about the distinctive character of public-sector workers unions: public-sector unions can distort labor markets by politicizing hiring and firing; public-sector unions tend to put serious pressure on public finance (for which weak politicians, seeking electoral support, are at least as much at fault); and public-sector unions tend to diminish the quality of public services (by making it more difficult to apply the “good government” standards American trade unionism once supported).

To which cautions might be added — the self-interest of public-sector unions in enacting government (more government) + more jobs; more government jobs = more members of AFSCME, NEA and other public sector mega-unions; the resistance of union-organized government workers to change (does any serious student of American elementary and secondary education doubt that the immense and humanly tragic failures of America’s K-12 public schools have something to do with unions’ resistance to performance standards for teachers?), the capacity of public-sector unions and their political allies to hold hostage the normal processes of democracy (see “Wisconsin”); and the ways in which public-sector unions’ demands for ever-higher wages and benefits distort public finance and drain resources from other areas where social justice is at stake.

The right of workers to organize is a settled matter in Catholic social doctrine. But organized labor, like other parts of society, has responsibilities to the common good. No one will begrudge a union the right to defend its own, that’s why it exists. But when unions defend only their own, to the detriment of the rest of society (and in the American case, the detriment of poor, inner-city children), something is wrong.

Solidarity in Poland was a movement of social, cultural, moral and political renewal. It would be hard to say that about the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees or the National Education Association, just as it is impossible to draw an analogy between 21st-century AFSCME or NEA members and the union members of the pre-50s AFL-CIO (much less the Knights of Labor in their sweatshops). Appeals to the Solidarity experience, or to “traditional” as a Catholic reason for uncritically endorsing public-sector unions’ demands is not readily squared with either reality or Catholic social doctrine.

Russian Orthodox, Polish Catholic Leaders Send Reconciliation Message

Warsaw, Poland (CNS) — The head of the Russian Orthodox Church and the president of the Polish Catholic Bishops Conference signed a joint message Aug. 17 urging Poles and Russians to set aside centuries of anger and prejudice and work together to maintain their countries’ Christian identities.

The signing of the reconciliation “Message to the Nations of Poland and Russia” was the key moment of the first-ever visit of a Russian Orthodox patriarch to modern Poland. “We enter a path of honest dialogue in our pursuit of reconciliation,” said Patriarch Kirill of Moscow and Patriarch Jozef Michalik, president of the Polish bishops’ conference.

The signing ceremony was broadcast live on Polish television. Polish Catholic and Russian Orthodox officials had been preparing the statement for more than two years in an effort to overcome historical grudges between the two nations and long-standing tensions between the faithful of the Russian Orthodox Church and the Polish Catholic Church.

A long history of battles over territory became more complicated during World War II when Poland was invaded by both Germany and Russia. After the war, Poland came under the continued on Page 10

Catholic Foundation Program to Hold Fall Estate Planning Course

The Catholic Foundation is presenting a Continuing Education Program again this fall with an Estate Planning 2012 Course. The program has been scheduled from 8 a.m. until noon on Oct. 26, 2012, to be held at the Catholic Pastoral Conference Center.

The course is presented in support of the foundation’s ongoing mission to procure and build endowment funds while serving as a permanent organization for managing and administering funds given to the Archdiocese of Oklahoma City for the advancement and expansion of the Catholic Church in central and western Oklahoma. The course is open to the general public but is geared toward attorneys, accountants, financial planners and trust officers. Cost for this course is $50 in advance and $75 at the door. You can register online by clicking the Register Now Button below.

Our presenting program sponsor is Bank of Oklahoma. The Private Bank at Bank of Oklahoma provides individuals and families with comprehensive trust and estate administration, investment, financial planning and banking services through a highly experienced staff that works closely with their clients and their client’s advisers.

We are excited to announce that Charles D. “Skip” Fox IV of Charlottesville, Va., is the presenter of this year’s program. Fox is a partner with the law firm of McGuireWoods LLC, a law firm of approximately 900 attorneys in 19 locations worldwide.

Fox’s extensive experience includes estate planning and administration, investment, financial planning and banking services through a highly experienced staff that works closely with their clients and their client’s advisers.

Donating Real Estate

Donating real estate can be a winning situation for the donor. Consider some of the benefits:

◆ The donor can provide a sizable gift without sacrificing liquidity.
◆ Donors who contribute long-term capital gain property (real estate they have held for more than one year as an investment) — generally can deduct the property’s fair market value up to 30 percent of the donor’s adjusted gross income. Excess deductions can be carried forward up to five years after the donation.
◆ The donor avoids realizing capital gain on the property.
◆ The donor realizes a quick liquidation of assets.
◆ Donated property is excluded from the donor’s taxable estate.
◆ The donor is free from burdensome property-management duties and selling issues.

The greatest benefit of donating real estate is the satisfaction you receive from your gift to the Catholic Church and investing in the future of your faith.

CORNERSTONE

Retrouvaille to begin Sept. 7-9

Retrouvaille is a program designed to provide help and support to married couples who are undergoing difficulties in their relationships.

The program has also been proven to be helpful to couples who are separated or divorced. While the Retrouvaille program is Catholic in both origin and orientation, it is open to couples of other faiths.

The main emphasis of the program is on the communication between husband and wife. It gives couples the opportunity to both rediscover each other and to examine their lives together in a new and positive way.

Retrouvaille begins with a weekend session, which is then followed by six follow-up sessions. During the weekend a series of informal talks are given by a team of three couples and a priest.

Participating couples in the Retrouvaille program are not asked to share their problems with anyone else. There are no group dynamics or any type of group discussions.

For information about this year’s Retrouvaille program, which is scheduled to begin the weekend of Sept. 7-9 in Tulsa, call 918-695-7010, or go to www.helpourmarriage.com.

All inquiries about the Retrouvaille program are kept confidential.
Tyler Success Story Begins with Family

By Greg Horton
For the Sooner Catholic

OKLAHOMA CITY — One day after Oklahoma City-based Tyler Media became the largest privately held media company in the United States, co-owner and CEO Tony Tyler wanted to talk about one thing: his parents.

“I am who I am today because of my parents,” Tyler said. “This story is really about their influence in my life.”

The Tylers moved to Oklahoma City when their sons were small. Tyler said they wanted a private school education for Tony and his older brother, Ty. The couple were from small towns — mom from Cyril, dad from Okemah. They were farmers, and as Tony describes them, “farmers who feared God but weren’t religious.”

The family moved in across the street from a Catholic family who befriended the young couple. The boys were enrolled in St. James, and the family attended there throughout the boys’ education. Both would go on to graduate from Stillwater High School and attend the University of Oklahoma, a private Catholic university.

Ralph Tyler originally started the family business in 1965. He remained in the media business until 1986. Tony Tyler moved back from Dallas in 1992, and two years later, Ralph sold the media business. The company would add outdoor advertising and outdoor signage operations over the next several years.

The sons purchased the business from their father in 1995. Ty serves as president, Tony as vice president. By 2000, Tyler Media had 3,600 advertising displays in Oklahoma, and by the mid-2000s, they had started to acquire radio and television stations.

“My father laid a fabulous foundation,” Tony said. “We were able to grow rapidly because of the work he had done and how he had built the company.”

Media Venture Partners offers a brief summary of the company’s acquisitions: “Tyler Media bought its first radio station, KEBC-AM (now KGHM), in 1965, but exited the broadcast business in 1986. It returned in 1985 with the purchase of KTLS-FM (which it sold again in 1998) and added its first TV station, Oklahoma City’s Telemundo affiliate KTUS in 2004.”

The company now also owns UniVision affiliate KUOK-TV; two Class-A stations in Oklahoma City affiliated with UniVision and Estrella TV; and a UniVision-affiliated Class-A station in the Tulsa, Okla., market.

“Tony Tyler was also instrumental in bringing Oklahoma Catholic Broadcasting to KTTLR AM 890. Programming includes the popular Kresta in the Afternoon, St. Joseph Radio, and the excellent Catholic Answers Live.

Tony Tyler and his family now attend St. Mark’s in Norman. His wife, Shelley, attended Sacred Heart, The Mount and the University of Dallas. The couple has four children, ranging in age from 3 to 14. They are or will be attending All Saints, except for the oldest, who is already at his parents’ alma mater.

The Tylers carry on the tradition set by their parents. Tony served on the board of regents for Oklahoma City Community College. He still serves on the Catholic Foundation of Oklahoma City, the Oklahoma City Community Foundation and the Interstitial Cystitis Association, a nonprofit health association.

“I don’t talk about my living my faith. I guess it’s not a conscious thing. My parents raised us to do the things we’re supposed to do, to look at our lives and ask if we’re doing the right things. My dad taught me that if someone asks for a favor, I should ask if I can say no. If there is not a good reason to say no, I should do it. That’s what our parents instilled in us.”

Catholic Radio Ministry Blessed With Opportunities, Growth

PRAGUE — Did you hear the one about the Catholic radio station that was started in Prague, but wound up in Tulsa?

No joke.

Jeff Finnell shakes his head when he looks back at how the events unfolded that have resulted in Oklahoma Catholic Broadcasting now offering radio signals that cover roughly two-thirds of the state. Or, as he likes to put it, a potential listening audience of more than 2 million people.

Begun in 2006, Oklahoma Catholic Broadcasting started in Oklahoma City with an AM station provided by Tyler Media. The next move was to the FM side in Oklahoma City. A couple of years later a station was established in Lawton after the FCC granted a permit to establish a low power FM station there.

During this time of growth, Finnell, Deacon Larry Sousa and the others who have given their time, talent and treasure to make Catholic radio in Oklahoma a reality submitted a proposal to start a low power station in Prague.

“We really didn’t think much of it,” Finnell said. “It was available, but we were told by our attorney that two applications submitted for the Prague area were ahead of ours.”

The FCC accepts applications for these low power FM stations and then scores them. Two applications from Stillwater had scored higher than the plan submitted by the Catholic Broadcast team.

“We figured we missed out,” Finnell said. “They figured wrong.

“Out of the blue we are informed we’ve been granted the license to operate in Prague,” Finnell said. Apparently the two applications from Stillwater seeking the rights in Prague were changed and re-submitted. The second Stillwater applications did not score as highly, thus opening the door for the Catholic station.

“God has opened so many doors for us,” said Finnell, who serves as president of the Oklahoma Catholic Broadcasting Board.

And God apparently wasn’t finished with the Prague venture.

Finnell said connections have been made that will allow KIOP, the station in Prague, to relay its signal to two radio outlets, one in Bristow and the other in Tulsa. This means instead of reaching the 20,000 or so people who live in Prague and the surrounding area, Catholic radio will now have an audience of several hundred thousand in the Tulsa area.

Finnell said the radio ministry has received support from throughout the Archdiocese. In Prague, the effort received considerable support from the Shrine of the Infant Jesus of Prague as well as Saint Wenceslaus Parish, Prague, and Saint Michael’s Parish in Meeker.

KIOP will broadcast at 88.3 FM in Prague, while the signal will be carried on 165.7 FM and 94.9 FM in Tulsa and Bristow.

OKLAHOMA CITY — St. Charles Borromeo Church hosted the Fighting Hunger in Oklahoma Forum on Saturday, Aug. 11. The event brought together representatives from four organizations, including Catholic Charities of Oklahoma City.

The event was sponsored by Bread for the World, a Washington, D.C.-based nonprofit organization that advocates for food security and sustainability.

The event was a day-long forum that aimed to educate attendees about the need for hunger eradication and to inspire them to take action.

Bread for the World is a Washington, D.C.-based nonprofit organization that utilizes faith communities to advocate for policy solutions to end hunger. The organization works with legislative advocates to foster informed action by communities of faith.

Bread for the World is a member of the National Council of Churches and works with more than 30 interfaith organizations. The organization was founded in 1963 and is funded by contributions from individuals, foundations, and corporations.

Bread for the World fights hunger through advocacy, outreach, and educational efforts. The organization believes that ending hunger requires more than giving food to hungry people.

Mitchell Bequest Gives Church Role in Protecting ‘Wind’ Author’s Legacy

By Mary Anne Castronio

Catholic News Service

ATLANTA (CNS) — Because of a generous bequest from a great-granddaughter of Joseph Mitchell, the late nephew of celebrated author Margaret Mitchell, the Atlanta Archdiocese now owns 50 percent of the literary rights to her Pulitzer prize-winning, best-selling novel “Gone With the Wind.”

But what is the meaning of this for the Archdiocese of Atlanta? The short answer: continuing revenue from sales of books and merchandise and participation in protecting the copyright of Margaret Mitchell’s legacy.

Deacon Steve Swope, who has been instrumental in making arrangements for the bequest, said the archdiocese will be diligent in continuing to honor Mitchell’s opus, following in the footsteps of her late brother, Atlanta attorney Stephens Mitchell.

He said, “His mission was to protect the dignity of the work, and we are going to carry that on. We are going to do whatever we can to prevent it from infringement. We have an obligation to do that.”

First published in 1936 by Macmillan, the book sold 176,000 copies at its original release and was a runaway success. According to Publishers Weekly, by the end of 1938 more than a million copies had sold, and that number doubled after the release of the movie in 1939.

Today, an estimated 30 million copies have sold worldwide. Simon & Schuster now publishes the book, which sells an estimated 75,000 copies every year in hardcover and other formats.

According to “Margaret Mitchell’s Gone With the Wind: A Bestseller’s Odyssey From Atlanta to Hollywood,” by Ellen Brown and John Wylie Jr., the publisher expects a “profitable future for the remainder of the copyright term,” which ends in the United States in 2021, some 95 years after the first publication.

The book has been translated more than 30 times, including in countries as diverse as Albania, Chile, Denmark, Ethiopia, Lebanon, Turkey, Japan, Finland, the former Yugoslavia and Burma.

New editions continue to be published in Europe and Asia; the copyright has expired in Canada and Japan.

When Margaret died in 1949, and her husband, John Marsh, three years later, their estate and the entire literary rights went to her brother, Stephens, a real estate attorney and faithful Catholic in Atlanta. He in turn left the rights in trusts split between his sons, Eugene and Joseph.

With the 1960s, Stephens later turned to law partners Paul H. Anderson Sr. and Thomas Hal Clarke Sr. for help in managing the copyright protection of a sister’s book in the Unites States and abroad. Formally called the Stephens Mitchell Trust, the group was known as the Committee.

Paul H. Anderson Jr. followed in his father’s footsteps in 1976 to work with the Mitchell estate, along with Thomas Hal Clarke Jr., the son of the other attorney. Together they have protected the copyright for decades. While the senior Clarke is retired at 98, the senior Anderson at 94 still serves on the Committee and has a perspective of the copyrights going back to the 1960s.

According to the junior Anderson, Stephens “did more than anyone to preserve and enhance the rights” of his sister’s work.

Sales are still brisk in countries across the globe, particularly, said Anderson, “in countries who have suffered defeat in war.”

Anderson said the owners of the trusts — and the archdiocese is now one of the owners — are entitled to “fairly significant” royalties from proceeds of book sales (the original novel and the two authorized sequels), merchandising, and at least $100,000 per year from the movie rights. He declined to name an exact figure.

The caretaking of the trust and the literary rights will continue to be done by the lawyers of the Committee, on behalf of Eugene’s heirs and the Archdiocese of Atlanta, in a new entity recently established to continue the tradition of protecting one of the best-selling novels in the world.

Castronio is executive editor of The Georgia Bulletin, newspaper of the Atlanta Archdiocese.

The churches and their faithful must make “every effort so that the social life and culture of our nations not be stripped of principal moral values, a reason to work toward a peaceful future,” the message said.

The patriarch and the archbishop expressed particular concern about “the family, divorce, remarriage, abortion, euthanasia and same-sex relations,” as well as attempts to remove religious symbols from public places.

“The future of the name of our nations, we call for the respect and protection of the life of each and every human being from the moment of conception until natural death. We believe in peace through a negotiated settlement of armed conflict, but also abortion and euthanasia to be grave sins against life and a disgrace to contemporary civilization,” the church leaders’ message said.

While Patriarch Kirill and Archbishop Michalik said they recognized the regime of their churches as the “Church of the fathers was, they encouraged cooperation to protect the family, promote education and assist the poor.”

The message “proclaimed a permanent bond between a man and woman, ‘is a sound foundation of all societies. As an institution founded by God, the family warrants respect and protection as it is the cradle of life, a wholesome place of development, a guarantee of social stability, and a sign of hope for society,’” they said.

Hughes — Prayer, Dialogue is Sisters’ Gift to Church

WASHINGTON (CNS) — The way 900 women religious “went about the decision” of responding to the Vatican’s doctrinal assessment of their organization was almost as “historic and important as the decision itself,” said Dominican Sister Mary Hughes, a former president of the Leadership Conference of Women Religious.

Sister Hughes, addressing a luncheon at the National Press Club in Washington, said that although the sisters “devoted a significant amount of time to the assessment during their Aug. 7-10 meeting in St. Louis, they did not have ‘fiery speeches’ or discussion but instead primarily engaged in contemplative silence, listening and prayer. At the close of the four-day assembly LCWR leaders, speaking on behalf of the entire group, said they would pursue “open and honest dialogue” with church officials about the assessment by the Vatican Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith. The assessment, issued April 18, said a reform of LCWR was needed to ensure its fidelity to Catholic teaching in areas including abortion, euthanasia, women’s ordination and homosexuality.

Seattle Archbishop J. Peter Sartain, charged with overseeing the group’s reform, met with LCWR’s national board Aug. 11. He said in a statement after the meeting that he is “truly hopeful that we will work together without compromising church teaching or the important role of the LCWR.”

Vatican Nuncio to Syria: People ‘Stunned ... Worried for the Future’

By Cindy Wooden

Catholic News Service

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — People in Syria are “stunned and deeply saddened and worried for the future,” said Archbishop Mario Zenari, the Vatican nuncio to Syria.

In an interview with Vatican Radio conducted on Aug. 21, the nuncio said the previous day’s withdrawal of U.N. forces was “a sad blow. Three or four months ago, there was a good bit of hope for their mission, and now their departure plunges us back into this reality. The international community must not give up, it must keep trying.”

U.N. military observers left Syria Aug. 20 after it was clear the cease-fire they were meant to monitor did not exist. The same day, U.S. President Barack Obama warned there would be “enormous consequences” for Syria if it began moving or using its stockpile of chemical weapons. Archbishop Zenari declined to comment on Obama’s remarks, but said, “At this moment we must require all sides in the conflict to rigorously respect international humanitarian law which, as we’ve seen, has gone to pieces because of the actions of both sides.”

While the 17-month-old conflict began as part of the pro-democracy Arab Spring movement, Archbishop Zenari said, “Unfortunately, now there’s the impression and the general fear that things have gotten out of hand.”

And while the international community can and must help, he said, Syrians are the ones who must ultimately decide to lay down their weapons and start negotiating to find their way to a peaceful end of hostilities in their country.

“Finding a path to peace is a very difficult thing that will entail sacrifices; it’s painful, but it’s something that no one can do for the Syrians. We really need to encourage all ethnic and religious groups to find the path to peace together,” he said.

Catholic Charities Offers Relief, Counseling In Wake of Aug. 3 Wildfires

OKLAHOMA CITY — As Oklahomans begin to put together the pieces following the Aug. 3 wildfires, Catholic Charities Disaster Relief program is on hand to offer assistance and counseling to those affected in Glencoe, Luther and the Noble-Slaughterville area.

Catholic Charities is ready and available to help victims in the aftermath of this disaster and help create a customized plan for recovery, including counseling, to all who have experienced loss and destruction as a result of these fires,” said Tim O’Connor, executive director of Catholic Charities.

Damon Britton, associate director of Children and Family Services, oversees the organization’s disaster response work. A part of the Oklahoma Voluntary Organizations Active in Disaster (Oklahoma VOAD), Catholic Charities’ Disaster Relief program provides critical emergent assistance, counseling, community referrals and case management to Oklahomans in the western two-thirds of the state. In addition, while some disaster recovery programs assist with the short-term needs, Catholic Charities focuses on case management to help people in the long term.

O’Connor said one of the greatest immediate needs following a disaster is cash assistance for food, fuel and incidental expenses associated with relocation. The agency offers bank cash cards to help with unmet needs. Catholic Charities has set up a fund to be used specifically for helping victims of these wildfires. For more information about Catholic Charities’ Disaster Relief program or to donate to the fund, visit www.catholiccharitiesok.org, or call (405) 523-3000.

The cost of recovery assistance are encouraged to register with American Red Cross Disaster Services, which helps coordinate relief efforts, or contact Catholic Charities’ Disaster Relief Program at (405) 523-3000.

Rachel’s Vineyard Retreat Can Be a ‘Life-changing’ Experience

I attended a Rachel’s Vineyard Retreat after struggling with my decision to have an abortion 14 years ago. I had been to confession and prayed for forgiveness, but even though I knew God forgives all, I couldn’t forgive myself and did not truly feel forgiven by God. I had to do something more. The retreat was an effort on my part to find forgiveness and move past this terrible decision I made so long ago.

The retreat was truly life-changing. I met women who had been through the same things I had. I found I was not alone in my guilt and that others understood without judgment.

I did not need people to judge me. I did that enough to myself. I needed to find healing. I was able to connect with my child on a real level and affirm that she is a real person and a real soul in Heaven. I was able to say goodbye. I still think about my decision and my daughter, but now it is with a longing to meet her one day and I smile to think of her watching over me.

I have found closeness to God and Mary through this experience. The rosary is a place I find comfort. I never felt worthy to pray wholeheartedly before and I am glad to have that back.

The retreat is life-changing. I hope anyone struggling with the regret that abortion causes will attend a retreat and find the healing love of God that God wants to give.

Are you suffering from an abortion, or know someone who is? You are not alone. Experience the healing love of Jesus Christ at a Rachel’s Vineyard weekend retreat Oct. 26-28. The retreat offers a profound opportunity, with a team of trained companions, therapists and clergy, to experience God’s love, forgiveness and compassion. Participation is strictly confidential.

The Rachel’s Vineyard Retreat is sponsored by the Archdiocesan Office of Family Life. For more information, call (405) 623-3844 or email: rachelsvineyardokdce@gmail.com.

The cost for the retreat is $75 for meals, a private room and all retreat materials. Payment plans and financial assistance are available.

For a description of the retreat and a complete list of other retreat dates and locations, call 1-877-HOPE 4 ME, or visit the organization’s international website located at www.rachelsvineyard.org.

Lagos Archbishop Criticizes Nigeria’s Handling of National Security

LAGOS, Nigeria (CNS) — Archbishop Alfred Adewale Martins of Lagos criticized the Nigerian government for its handling of the nation’s security challenges and warned against allowing an extremist sect to destabilize the country. The archbishop cautioned Christians against participating in violence but expressed his support for the call by the Christian Association of Nigeria that Christians should defend themselves whenever they come under any attack. “The human life is sacred and must be regarded as such by anybody,” he told journalists during an Aug. 16 briefing at the Church of the Assumption. The Islamist militant group Boko Haram has taken credit for a series of attacks on places of worship in northern and central Nigeria in some cases, Christians have retaliated. Since 2010, Boko Haram has been blamed for more than 1,400 deaths. Archbishop Martins told journalists the government must deal quickly and decisively with any acts of aggression against Nigerians. He also said he supported dialogue, if necessary, between warring parties. “War has never brought about peace in the history of humanity,” he said.

The archbishop, who served as bishop of Abeokuta until being installed to head the Lagos Archdiocese Aug. 4, also criticized the government for “not doing enough to deal with corruption. It needs to do much more than it is doing so far.”

Muy Pronto en una Parroquia Cercana a la de Usted

Desde mi llegada a la Arquidiócesis en febrero de 2011, he adquirido un conocimiento general de la mayoría de las comunidades parroquiales de la Arquidiócesis. Todavía tengo mucho que aprender. Sigo profundizando mi apoyo a la arquidiócesis y la vida católica en Oklahoma. A pesar de que constituyamos una minoría relativamente pequeña de la población total del Estado hemos tenido un gran impacto en muchas áreas que afectan el bien común como la educación, la salud y servicios sociales. La Iglesia Católica ha sido un faro de la verdad y un fermento para el bien de la sociedad y en nuestras comunidades.

La exploración del entorno en el que los católicos que vivimos en Oklahoma hoy revelan muchas tendencias importantes y dignas de mención.

—Estamos viviendo durante un periodo de cambio cultural y social rápido. Esto está siendo impulsado en parte por una economía globalizada y facilitado por las nuevas tecnologías digitales y medios de comunicación sociales.

—Somos de una gran diversidad étnica y el crecimiento de la población católica en Oklahoma surge de una presencia hispánica en rápido crecimiento.

—Estamos siendo desafiados por un espíritu secular cada vez más hostil que constituye una amenaza a las libertades fundamentales como la Libertad Religiosa y el derecho a la vida.

—El panorama económico general de gran parte de nuestra zona se ve brillante, muchos de nosotros sobreviven viviendo en la pobreza y en las sombras que los hacen vulnerables a la explotación.

—Muchos de estos factores, además de otros, contribuyen a un debilitamiento de las estructuras familiares tradicionales, que a su vez quebranta nuestra capacidad para transmitir la fe con eficacia.

El reconocimiento de estas nuevas realidades han llevado a los últimos Papas a llamar a una Nueva Evangelización. Tenemos que encontrar nuevos métodos y medios de proclamar la Buena Nueva de Jesucristo para responder a las preguntas más profundas y a las necesidades reales de las personas hoy en día.

Conforme voy obteniendo una mayor apreciación de nuestra rica herencia Católica en Oklahoma También estoy mirando hacia el futuro. Pienso en mi arzobispo, ¿qué es lo que el Señor nos pide hoy? ¿Hacia dónde está guiando el Espíritu Santo en la Iglesia en Oklahoma a medida que entramos en los retos y oportunidades de una Nueva Evangelización?

Con el fin de responder a estas preguntas he iniciado un proceso para desarrollar una Visión Mutuamente Compartida para establecer las principales prioridades pastorales de la Arquidiócesis de Oklahoma City. Esto articulará la visión de concentrar nuestros esfuerzos en el transcurso de los próximos años. He formado un equipo para que me ayude con esta importante tarea. Necesito su ayuda. Ni yo ni el equipo podemos desarrollar esta Visión sin usted.

He aquí la manera cómo usted puede ayudar. A partir de septiembre y hasta noviembre habrá una serie de sesiones de escucha en varias parroquias ubicadas estratégicamente en toda la Arquidiócesis. Cuando usted se entere que vendrá a una sesión de escucha en una parroquia cercana a la suya espero que pueda hacer el tiempo de venir para que yo pueda saber de usted. Su aporte será muy importante en el desarrollo de una visión clara y una definición de prioridades que se convertirán en el centro de nuestras energías para los próximos años.

Usted se enterará más sobre esto en las semanas y meses venideros. Pero quería que lo escuchara de mí primero. Vaya a una parroquia cercana a la suya. Exípo tener la oportunidad de escucharle.

Sesiones de Escucha-Visión Mutuamente Compartida

En la Arquidiócesis de Oklahoma City sigue al servicio del Reto de Dios en medio de nosotros, el Arzobispo Coakley, junto con un equipo representativo de líderes de la arquidiócesis, está buscando su opinión y consejo. Sesiones de Escucha-Visión Mutuamente Compartida se llevarán a cabo de acuerdo con el siguiente esquema, para abordar las siguientes preguntas:

1. ¿Cuál es su visión para nuestro futuro en los próximos cinco años?
2. ¿Qué tres prioridades le gustaría ver que la arquidiócesis tomen durante un periodo de 24 meses?

Decenas de Miles de Católicos se Reúnen Para Honrar a Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe

LOS ANGELES (CNS) — Eileen Frutos siempre ha sido atraída hacia María. Siendo miembro del Apostolado Mundial de Fátima, ella dijo que frecuentemente reza con María y que sus rogativas han sido contestadas.

“Ella ha sido asombrosa para nuestra familia”, dijo la residente de Ventura el 5 de agosto en el colegio Los Angeles Memorial. Por eso Frutos y su esposo estaban asistiendo a la celebración de la Guadalupe que abarcaba decenas de miles de católicos de todo el sur de California para celebrar a Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe y reverenciar una reliquia del manto en el que la Virgen María apareció a Juan Diego el 12 de diciembre de 1531.

Mientras servía en la Región X, y después, el señor Moreno hizo varias visitas a la Arquidiócesis de Oklahoma City para conferencias. Se convirtió en un amigo de varios miembros de las distintas comunidades religiosas aquí, incluyendo la hermana Merys Josefina Gómez, HCG, quien se desempeñó en el Ministerio Hispano en Saint Charles Borromeo.

Fue la hermana Merys quien contactó a Moreno cuando la posición de la Arquidiócesis estuvo disponible. Ella estaba sirviendo en el comité de búsqueda para esta posición, encabezado por el Padre William Novak, encargado de encontrar un nuevo director para la oficina.

Casado desde hace más de 30 años y con tres hijas, Moreno, cinco en el seminario antes de ser llamado al Sacramento del Matrimonio. Realizó sus estudios en la Pontificia Universidad Católica de Puerto Rico para obtener una Licenciatura en Artes especializada en Filosofía. Luego pasó a obtener una Maestría en Educación Religiosa de la Universidad. También continuó sus estudios de teología en la Universidad de Dallas y comenzó un Doctorado en Homilética en el Instituto Aquinas en St. Louis, Missouri.

El plan de Moreno para los primeros meses en la Arquidiócesis de Oklahoma City es “escuchar y conocer a la gente.” También necesita aprender acerca de todas las bendiciones y cosas maravillosas que hay en el mundo religioso. No hay mal que sea porque hay un montón de preguntas”, dijo Moreno al ser consultado sus metas y el tipo de trabajo que se hará.

“Yo no tengo las respuestas, pero tengo un montón de preguntas”, dijo Moreno al ser consultado sus metas para el Departamento del Ministerio Hispano. Él ha hecho su tarea, estudiado la composición de la Arquidiócesis y se dio cuenta de que en algunos puntos, las cosas no parecen estar acorde.

“En los Estados Unidos se estima que el 60 por ciento de todos los hispanos son Católicos”, dijo Moreno. Preguntado por las intervenciones de parte de las iglesias en las áreas rurales, Moreno cree que el nuevo objetivo es atraer las “sesiones de escucha” que el Papa Benedicto XVI ha fomentado en Roma y en otros lugares de la Arquidiócesis. Él no estaría allí para hablar, sino para escuchar. “Tengo dos lenguas, y también tengo dos orejas”, dijo Moreno. Él también tiene algunas corbatas de colores que lo hacen fácil de divisar.

Fe, Servicio, Caridad Claves Para Evangelización, DiceTexto Sinodal

CIUDAD DEL VATICANO (CNS) — Los católicos que actúan como si la fe no tuviera nada que ver con la vida cotidiana y los que ven una estructura eclesiástica que es más burocracia que vida, no tienen nada que ver con la fe en Jesús, dice el documento de trabajo del sínodo de 2012 en una conferencia de prensa del Vaticano el 4 de marzo.

“La nueva evangelización, este dice, “necesita nuevos instrumentos y una nueva formación de personas y comunidades”. El documento dice que el sínodo intentará responder a “la necesidad de nuevos instrumentos y nuevas expresiones para hacer la palabra de Dios comprensible en la vida del hombre contemporáneo”.

El Papa Benedicto XVI hizo un llamado a que el sínodo responda a esta necesidad de que la fe en Jesús y la práctica de las obras de caridad no sean vistas como algo alejado de la vida cotidiana. El Papa Benedicto XVI también dijo que el sínodo intentará responder a la necesidad de nuevos instrumentos y nuevas expresiones para hacer la palabra de Dios comprensible en la vida del hombre contemporáneo”. Pedro Moreno

Moreno’s Faith Leads Him to Hispanic Ministry

By Ray Dyer

OKLAHOMA CITY — Pedro Moreno isn’t one to wear his faith on his sleeve, as the old saying goes. No, the new director of Hispanic Ministry for the Archdiocese of Oklahoma City is more likely to proclaim his love for God on his necktie. “Oh, this, I have several of these, I love them,” he said, fingering the colorful tie that proclaims “With God All Things Are Possible” (Matthew 19:26). “Cardinal Burke, when I was with the Archdiocese of St. Louis, said I was the only guy he knew who would evangelize with his clothes.”

After a few minutes with Moreno, the 63-year-old New York City-born son of Puerto Rican parents, one gets the feeling he is willing to evangelize with his entire being.

Moreno comes to Oklahoma City from the Diocese of Fort Worth. He has also taught theology, both in English and Spanish, at the University of Dallas’ School of Ministry. He has also served as director of Parish Bible Study in English and Spanish and as the director for the Spanish RCIA program at St. Peter the Apostle Catholic Church in Fort Worth.

Moreno is a talented writer, having won numerous journalism awards from the Catholic Press Association. One of his works was published by CNN and can be found on the Cable News Network’s website. He spent a year as the diocesan director of Hispanic Ministry before being called to the sacrament of marriage. He studied at the Pontifical Catholic University of Puerto Rico, obtaining a bachelor of arts as a philosophy major. He went on to earn a master’s of theology at the University of Puerto Rico, obtaining a bachelor of arts as a philosophy major. He went on to earn a master’s of religious education from the University of Dallas, and began a Doctorate in Ministry in Homiletics at Aquinas Institute of Theology in St. Louis, Mo.

Moreno’s plan for the first several months in the Archdiocese of Oklahoma City is “to listen and get to know people. I also need to learn about all the blessings and wonderful things that have been going on already in Hispanic Ministry throughout the Archdiocese of Oklahoma City and celebrate them.”

With a personality that seems to make him easy to spot, he has also some colorful ties that add up. “I have a bilingual tongue, and I also have bilingual ears,” Moreno said when asked his goals for the Hispanic Ministry Department. He has done his homework, studying the makeup of the Archdiocese and noticing that on some points, things don’t appear to be there to speak, but to listen.

“I have a bilingual tongue, and I also have bilingual ears,” Moreno said. “God was so flexible He became man. He became one of us,” Moreno said. “If God can become man, some of us should be able to learn a little Spanish to bring the Gospel of Jesus Christ to the people.”

Moreno knows some may bristle at this idea, but he’s not backing away. “I’ve learned sometimes you have to, for the sake of justice, you have to be a little assertive, Not in an ugly way but in a loving, Christ-like way.”

Moreno said he plans to attend the “listening sessions” Archbishop Coakley has scheduled at various parishes in the Archdiocese. He won’t be there to speak, but to listen.

“I have a bilingual tongue, and I also have bilingual ears,” Moreno said. He also has some colorful ties that make him easy to spot.
